Tax Portar of the Hearews. It may truly be said, that poetry is a grand element in the character of the Hebrew people. Their history is a sublime epic of Providence; their very laws are bright-with wests because their of Providence; their very laws are bright-ity tinged with poetic beauty; their sacred oracals reveal the future of our common race in magnificent poetic forms; their inspired lyrics furnish the language for inspired lyrics furnish the language for the worship of successive generations; they afford a solace in the afflictive cares of life, they hover on the lips of the dying, they are destined to be sung by nations yet unborn, and to be the hymnbook of a regenerated world. This is of course to be understood entirely of the songs of the Hebrew Bible. Excellent as are many of the latter productions of the Jewish pen in this department, there is an impossable line between them and the compositions of the prophetic writers. The first great distinction between these two classes of poetry arises writers. The first great distinction between these two classes of poetry arises from the fact that the hiblical songs were not the products of mere human genius, but a thoephany in words, and subodiment of Divine inspiration. This greathem a majesty for ever unapproachable by any effort of the unassisted mind, the most brilliant creations of which are no more sonal to the affects. tea mind, the most brilliant creations of which are no more equal to the effulgent grandeur of the Bible, than the sparks which glow in the peasant's hearth may be compared with the glory of the noon-tide sun—[Etheridge.

Tux following is from the report in the Atlanta Herald of the hanging of Susan Eberhardt: At five minutes to 12 the signal was given, the drop fell, and the body of Susan Eberhardt was dangthe ing in the air. Her fall was five feet.
The apprehensions of the unfortunate creature had been realized. Her neck The apprehensions of the unfortunate creature had been realized. Her neck was not broken. She struggled convulsively, drew up her body and arms, and swung completely round, making fearful efforts to free her arms. Her hands opened and shut repeatedly. Every nerve in her body seemed convulsed in agony, and her limbs opened and closed as if in wild and unavailing efforts to seek some foothold on which to rest her feet. There was, however, no rest for her. The fatel rope, too remorseless for life, held firm, despite the efforts of the convict to burst its strangling bands. Each minute of torture seemed an hour to the crowd. The sufferings of the poor creature must have been as terrible r creature must have been as terrible poor creature must have been as terrible to her as they were painful to witness. A perceptible shudder passed through the spectators, who were all greatly af-fected. It was, altogether, a frightful

While the Quakers all over the world While the Quakers all over the world seem to be dying out, one of their car-dinal principals has given rise to a new sect in the departments of the Drome and Ardeche in France. The members of this religious sect call themselves of this religious sect call themselves Derbists, and their great precept is that human life is sacred, and consequently war is a crime of the greatest magnitude and all who engage in it are criminals. A young conscript, a follower of the sect was lately sent to his regiment. He rewas lately sent to his regiment. He re-fused to carry arms, and was tried by Court-martial for breach of discipline. His behavior on trial was praiseworthy. He told the presiding officer that he had disobeyed the military laws, but had acted in conformity with those of the gospel. He had previously declared that he would rather suffer death than repudite his principals. What the Court-martial will do with him is not yet known.

A SERIOUS SUBJECT.—Never laugh as religion. Never make a jest of sacred things. Never mock those who are things. Never mock those who are serious and in earcest about their souls.

SERIOUS SUBJECT.—Never laugh as religion. Never make a jest of sacred things. Never mock those who are selected stock of CLOTHING. FURNISHING GOODS, FURNISHING GOODS, FURNISHING HOUSE, AND SHOES, BOOTS AND SHOES, those happy whom you laugh at-a time then your laughter will be turned int heaviness. Whatever you please to laugh at don't laught at religion.

Some boys dropped an anvit weighing two hundred pounds out of a fourth-story window on the head of a negro who was passing, and he had them ar-rested. He said he was willing to let the boys have fun, but when they jammed a genmen's hat down over his eyes, and speiled it in that way, the law must take its course.

POISONED ATMOSPHERE.—The most deadly enemy of human life is our own breath. A canary bird hung in its cage over night at the top of a curtained bed has been found dead in the morning rom the poisoned atmosphere created by the human lungs of the sleepers be-

O the snore, the beautiful snore, fill-ing her chamber from coiling to floor! Over the coverlet, under the sheet, from over the coveriet, under the sheet, from her dimpled chin to her pretty feet! Now comes highly recommended a medicine to which no one can object— celery. It tastes good, and is said to be one of the most potent nervines known. The time to take it is when you please, and the dose is as much as you want. All affected with nervousness in any form are encouraged to hope for an effectual cure by the daily use of celery.

BUTTERMILE is an aid to the digestion of any food taken with it; and by many bygienists is regarded as an excellent substitute for fruit in winter, and a prevention of spring sickness. It is especially recommended to invalids who suffer from indigestion—drink it at meal times.

A Baltimork lightning rod man fell from the roof of a five story building in that city last week, and struck on the top of an old gentleman. Both were rendered insensible, and before the old man had recovered his feet, the agent had taken his order for a rod.

delions, caravans, seissors-grinders, ar-tichokes, violets and hand-organs, will soon sing, shine, show, sharpen, scent and shriek that Spring has come."

A cass which possessed the unusual feature of being tried by a negro jury came off at Springfield, Mo., recently. It was a breach of promise case, all shady, and the dusky damaged one got within $10 of the sum she sued for—that is, $80.
